PLACES / TIME

We can use "which" with a preposition to refer to places and times, but it's more common to use "where" or "when" instead of "which" with the preposition.

- The tech convention center, which we used to go to, has been relocated to a larger venue.
- The tech convention center, where we used to go, has been relocated to a larger venue.

On the other hand, if we use "which" without a preposition, we cannot use "where" or "when".

- Correct: Silicon Valley, which we hate, is a few miles from our store.
- Incorrect: Silicon Valley, where we hate, is a few miles from our store.
