Just / Already / Yet

"Just": to emphasize that the event happened very recently.

- The code has just compiled.

- I have just pushed the changes to the repository.

"Already": used in positive sentences to talk about actions that have been completed sooner than expected.

- The test cases have already passed.

- I have already implemented the new feature.

"Yet": is used in at the end of negative sentences and questions to talk about things that are expected to happen soon. "

- Have you completed the merge request yet?

- I haven't finished debugging the code yet.

↑ Just / Already / Yet

"Just": to emphasize that the event happened very recently.

- The code has just compiled.

- I have just pushed the changes to the repository.